represent a range of farming systems practices and soil types, so that the dynamics of groundcover and impacts of management could be better understood. Ground cover was measured in 2010 in the BCG Farming Systems Trial, which includes the full range of Mallee farming systems practices on one soil type, and the 15 Dynamics in farming systems: of changes and choices 339 This might be linked to the fact that hunger and plenty are not only a matter of food production and high yields. Food distribution is perhaps a more crucial issue than production alone. Only 160 years ago, the Irish potato famine showed how some of farming systems influences discussion between cornucopians and conservationists, and between reductionist and holistic approaches to research. There is a need to recognize context (suitability of technology), and to pay more attention to relations within systems (system dynamics) and to defining criteria for sustainability. The
